Dear Community Partner,

On Sunday, April 28th, churches across the country will show their commitment to supporting the most vulnerable populations in their communities on Blue Sunday—a day of prayer for children who have been impacted by child abuse and the people who work tirelessly to protect them.

Your church can participate in different ways, including inviting CASA to speak to your congregation about becoming a CASA volunteer, sharing the Blue Sunday resources included in the Blue Sunday kit with your congregation, or taking up a special offering to support CASA of Denton County's work in advocating for the best interests of those affected by child abuse.

It takes a community to care for children, and that's part of what places of worship are – a community. Our hope is to inform all the diverse faith organizations in our area on ways they can make a difference for the children who have been impacted by child abuse.

There are currently 368 children in foster or kinship care in Denton County due to abuse or neglect. Every one of these children deserves every possible chance to succeed in life. CASA volunteers can help give them that chance.

CASA volunteers are everyday citizens from the community who are screened, trained, and appointed by a judge to advocate for these children's best interests as they navigate the child welfare system. They get to know the child, speak with all relevant contacts in their lives, and make informed recommendations to the court for the best interests of the child.

We hope you will consider observing Blue Sunday at your church on Sunday, April 28th. Your congregation can truly make a difference in your community by supporting CASA or becoming a CASA advocate.

Please contact Jen Adame at recruiter@casadenton.org to learn more about participating in Blue Sunday.

With gratitude,
